Chicken Pox

I am writing to inform you that a small number of children in Key Stage One have contracted chicken pox over the last week.

Whilst not wishing to cause alarm, I am sure you will want to be aware of this and alert anyone visiting the school who thinks she might be pregnant.

If you suspect your child has chicken pox, you should consult your GP for treatment. The recommended absence from school is five days from the onset of the rash but obviously this might need to be longer, depending on the degree of illness.
